Indian Teacher Education at Crossroads: Whitherto

The history of teacher education in India can be traced back to Vedic era but it formally started as early as in 1802 when an institution for training the teachers was first started by Danish Missionaries. In 1854, the famous Wood's Dispatch emphasized over the need for teachers' training. By the year 1947, teacher-training programme was quite comprehensive in India, but its over-all condition still needed improvements as the needs of the country were fast expanding. The first commission in free India, University Education Commission (1948), critically scanned the existing courses in teacher training programme and the term "teacher training" was given a new nomenclature - "teacher education". In 1950, as a follow-up to this Commission, the First Conference of Training Colleges in India was held at Baroda to discuss programmes and functions of training colleges. This conference also resulted in constitution of our organization "Indian Association of Teacher Educators (IATE)". After that, Kothari Commission (1964-66), National Policy of Education (1986), and Yashpal Committee (1993) provided required suggestions for a sound professional education programme for teachers.

As a landmark, on 17th August 1995, National Council for Teacher Education (NCTE) was established as a statutory body in pursuance to the National Council for Teacher Education Act, 1993. The NCTE sets up norms and standards for teacher education- right from pre-school teacher

CALL FOR PAPERS

The conference invites teacher educators from colleges and universities, DIET teachers, researchers, educational administrators, NGOs working in the field of education and/or special education, and management members of teacher training institutions to provide innovative papers with original thinking on following sub-themes:

- Teacher Education in India: Historical Perspectives
- Problems and Prospects of Teacher Education at Elementary Level
- Problems and Prospects of Teacher Education at Secondary Level
- Teacher Education at Tertiary Level: Need and Implementation Strategies
- Revamping Teacher Education with Futuristic Approach
- Current Status & Future of Technological Inputs and other Innovations in Teacher Education
- Teacher Education for Inclusive Settings
- Role and Responsibilities of Apex Regulatory Bodies of Teacher Education.

education to post graduate level teacher education. NCTE notified revised Regulations and Norms and Standards on November 28, 2014 for a total of 15 Teacher Education Programmes (TEPs) including B.Ed. & M.Ed. The curriculum for B.Ed. & M.Ed. was modified and their duration was changed from one year to two years. All teacher education institutions had to comply with norms and standards related to these 15 programmes with effect from academic session 2015-16 as a mandatory feature. The changes have been widely criticized on many grounds but to no avail. No attempts have ever been made to empirically or otherwise establish the superiority of present TEPs over the previous ones. The government has now declared that, from July 2019 onwards, one TEP namely integrated four years B.A. B Ed. /B.Sc. B.Ed. will be offered in the field of teacher education. This makes the existing many TEPs redundant within 4 years of their implementation. Again, no empirical or other evidences to offer! Teacher education has reached at the crossroads and no-one knows the road ahead.

Keeping this in mind, Indian Association of Teacher Educators (IATE) has decided to organize its 52nd Annual Conference on “Indian Teacher Education at Crossroads: Whitherto” during February 15-17, 2019 at the Department of B. Ed./M. Ed. (IASE), MJP Rohilkhand University, Bareilly (U.P.).
